

A close-up photograph of a wooden furniture corner, showing the grain and texture of the wood. The corner is formed by two thick wooden beams meeting at a right angle, with a third beam running parallel to them. The wood has a warm, medium-brown tone and a visible grain pattern. The lighting is soft, highlighting the texture of the wood.

Inspired by Clara Porset's legacy, the PORSET CONCRETE CHAIR translates a historic silhouette of curved lines into the solidity of concrete, exploring new relationships between the body, the object, and the landscape. Designed for outdoor use, its materiality embraces the passage of time, resisting the elements while continuously integrating and transforming with its natural surroundings.
